On Wilfrid Voynich

(From Voynichiana: documents, images, and research illuminating the lives of Wilfrid and Ethel Voynich and of Anne M. Nill, Wilfrid Voynich's assistant and Ethel's life-long companion after Voynich's death.)

The U.S. Bureau of Information File

On Wilfrid Voynich¹

During World War I Voynich came to the attention of the U.S. Bureau of Investigation, the forerunner of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, as a possible enemy agent. The records in the BOI's declassified file on Voynich suggest at least two informants mentioned him to the agency. One, W.S. Booth, was a minor writer-scholar of British origin living in Boston with whom Voynich had early on been friendly and to whom he wrote in 1917 (p. 1) hoping to renew their acquaintance. To judge from Voynich's letter, he had previously given Booth photostats of his "Bacon cypher" and Booth had expressed willingness to try decrypting them. Voynich asks Booth if anything ever came of his efforts. He tells Booth the War Department in Washington "is working on the subject" and expresses hope they will succeed in "transliterating" the manuscript.² Voynich's letter aroused Booth's suspicions and he forwarded it to the Department of Justice in Washington³ with a cover letter (p. 3). The BOI file also contains a hand-written, unaddressed, and undated note by Booth (p. 4; a transcription follows on p. 5) arguing both for and against Voynich's trustworthiness. The Department of Justice acknowledged receipt of Booth's letter (p. 6) and there the matter seems to have ended.

Of more consequence was the rumor, which somehow got started in Chicago, that Voynich was in possession of the U.S. War Department cipher. A BOI report of November 22, 1917 (p. 7) states that Voynich had had dinner sometime the previous year with Walter Lichtenstein, a naturalized American citizen of German birth. Lichtenstein was Head Librarian of Northwestern University Library and because of his position a likely customer for Voynich's wares.⁴ Two other persons, unnamed in the BOI document, are reported to

² Voynich had apparently sent off photostats of his Cipher Manuscript to the War Department, possibly to his friend Prof. John M. Manly (see below), hoping to get military codebreakers to work on them - this while war was raging in Europe.

³ Someone at the Department of Justice marked up Voynich's letter with notes and queries about Voynich and his manuscript, including claims that he was anti-British, pro-German, and, evidently to his further discredit, a Jew. See p. 2 for a transcription.

⁴ In addition to buying books and manuscripts for Northwestern, Lichtenstein made purchases on trips to Europe for Harvard University, the University of Chicago, and the Newberry Library of Chicago (see letter of John M. Manly, pp. 17-18). In 1918, in the anti-have attended the dinner. It is likely that Voynich, as he frequently did, got to talking of his Bacon Cipher and, as he did in his letter to Booth, claimed the War Department in Washington was at work on it. Someone, probably one of Lichtenstein's other guests, misunderstood Voynich's table talk and thought he was claiming to be in possession of the American War Department cipher (as if there were only one). The conversation was reported to the BOI, which ultimately opened a file on Voynich.⁵

The BOI documents contain descriptions of Voynich's sales methods as well as impressions others had of the man, not all of them favorable. One document is a letter (pp. 17-18) from Prof. John M. Manly⁶ of the University of Chicago to a Lieut. Straus (apparently of the War Department) in which Manly strongly defends Voynich against rumors of disloyalty. Manly is under the impression that it was Lichtenstein who reported Voynich to the BOI.

Voynich also came to the attention of the American Protective League, a gang of volunteer snoops who specialized in harassing their fellow citizens, particularly those of German descent, and questioning their loyalty.⁷ Included in the BOI files are reports from the APL, one of which (p. 26) implies that its agents clandestinely entered and searched Voynich's offices in the Aeolian Building, 33 w 42nd Street, possibly with the connivance of the building management.

From BOI reporting we learn that Voynich opened his offices on the 16th floor of the Aeolian Building on January 1, 1917, had been living in the Waldorf Astoria, then moved to the Manhattan Hotel (p. 10); that he paid $100 a month rent for his offices (p. 45).

Others of Voynich's acquaintance mentioned in these documents are Anne M. Nill (pp. 40, 44) and John Manly's fellow scholar, Edith Rickert (misspelled "Richert," p. 42). Ethel Voynich makes appearances on pp. 7, 20, 40, and 41.

German climate of the times, Lichtenstein was hounded from his post at Northwestern and took a job with the First National Bank of Chicago. He eventually rose to the level of vice president. None of the allegations against him ever came to anything.

⁵ The documents in the file date from late 1917 to late 1920.

⁷ An early exemplar of intelligence outsourcing, the APL was formed in 1917 by a Chicago advertising man named A.M. Briggs. Its main branch disbanded after the Armistice, though local franchises lived on for years thereafter. How the APL heard of Voynich is not known.

Why?

My dear Mr. Booth:

It is ages since I had correspondence with you. I have no idea even whether or not you are in Boston. Do you remember that you took great interest in my Bacon cypher MS. I wonder what the result was of your attempting to decipher it. Now your War Department is working on the subject and I hope they will be able to transliterate it, with the help of their expert readers. Professor Manly of the University of Chicago is also working on the subject.

I have opened a regular office at the above address to which I am gradually removing my collections of illuminated MSS. and rare books. The first portion, which you have seen, now belongs, with the exception of a few items, to different public institutions in the United States.

If you are in New York while I am here I should be glad to see you again.

Yours sincerely

Dear Sirs,

I have no reason to suppose that Mr W.M.Voynich is not solely occupied with his bookselling, but the enclosed letter from him to me may be worth a moment's consideration in view of your reported difficulties with spies.

All I know of Voynich is that he is a well known dealer; that he told me he brought "practically" his whole fortune over here from London in the shape of books and manuscripts; that he appeared here, as I remember, some six months after the war had opened in Europe.

I have understood that he is a British Subject, married to an English-woman; that he is of Austrian birth; a Hebrew; that he is not loyal in his conversation about the land which has adopted him. He professed great distrust of Russia, and admiration of German ability to make good. He may have changed his views by this time.

As there is a possibility that the supposedly Roger Bacon M.S. is being used as a means of communication with some of the departments, I send Mr Voynich's letter to you for your files. Voynich told me that there were few places in Europe with which he was not conversant. He said he had relations with statesmen in his business. He was distinctly a boaster, and a good salesman, and he told fascinatingly mysterious stories of his adventures in search of hidden or lost libraries.

Mr. Ralph Clarkson, 410 S. Michigan Avenue, reports:

July 12, 1915, there appeared on the front page of the "Tribune" an article about a man named Lichtenstein. He was, and still is the librarian of the Northwestern University. Mr. Lichtenstein was returning from South America, and landed in Genoa or Naples, and was stopped by the authorities. He had in his possession some letters written in German which he was to have passed on to others, and two pass-ports, one German and one American. The American Consul asked for the American pass-port but had to take it by force. He returned to America and the university authorities investigated the case and exonerated him. However, the government refused to issue him another pass-port.

During the past year we have had in Chicago a man by the name of Wilfred N. Voynich, whose present address is 33 W. 42d Street, New York City. He is ostensibly a dealer in fine old manuscripts. He has put it over most of the wealthy Chicagoans. One of our own authorities says that he goes now as a Galician Jew, but that he has not an honest hair on his head. When he was here last year, he was entertained by the Librarian at his house in Evanston, where there were present two other people, a man and a woman. During the dinner he made the statement that he had in his possession the cipher of the American War Department. This Voynich is the husband of a well-known English author Ethel Lillian Voynich, who wrote the "Gadfly". He was better known as the husband of Ethel Lillian Voynich than because of his own merits. He travels a great deal. He brought over a great many supposedly fine manuscripts. He is possibly a German or Austrian.

It was to one of the people he met at the dinner at the home of Dr. Lichtenstein that he afterwards said that he had in his possession the war code and showed some of its peculiarities.

Pursuant to instructions from Assistant Division Superintendent Baker, based on report of Charles Daniel Frey of Chicago of Nov. 22, 1917, I inquired of renting agents Ellen and G.

Jefferey of 35 W. 42nd St, which is the office building in which de Voynich is located, and they informed me that he has occupied offices there since Jan. 1, 1917. He is a man quite intellectual and evidently very wealthy. From there Mr. Ellen referred me to the Waldorf Astoria Hotel. They informed me that he has lived there for over a year and occupies a very expensive suite. They consider him a valued guest, speak of him as a gentleman and know nothing wrong about him.

This investigation will be continued.

Continuing on the above, I called upon the Bank of British North America, located at 52 Wall St., and consulted Mr. W. T. Oliver and Mr. P. C. Harrison, who are the agents of the bank. They informed me that de Voynich was introduced to them in 1914 by Levetas and Company of 194 Bishops Gate, London in which they spoke of him as a valued client. All of his transactions at the bank have been records and remittances to L. ovetus and Company, supposedly from the sale of manuscripts. They consider him financially strong, but could tell me nothing further about his habits and activities in other matters.

STATEMENT OF OPERATIONS, EVIDENCE COLLECTED, NAMES AND ADDRESSES OF PERSONS INTERVIEWED, PLACES VISITED, ETC.: 113524 33357 Continuing on the above, I called on Mr. de Voynich at his office in the Aeolian Hall Building. I find him to be a man of great intellect and of very suave manner. He told me that he was born in Telshchi, Kovno, Russia. He is about sixty-four years of age. His British passport, No. 137797, shows that he left Falmouth, England, Sept. 22, 1916, which was the last time he was on the other side. He further showed me his ^{British} naturalization papers dated April 25, 1904.
Concerning the cipher which he is accused of possessing, he has shown me a book which he himself entitled "A Great Cypher Codex of Roger Bacon of the XIIIth Century." This book is quite antiquated in appearance and entirely in cipher. He values it at more than $100,000. He further informs me that he has had three pages of this book photostated and sent to Professor Manley, who is now Captain in the United States Army, located at the War College in Washington and is training American officers for service in France in cipher work. It seems to be his purpose, if possible, to have this manuscript translated so that it may be of use to our Government. In this connection, he further refers us to Dr. Garrison, librarian in the Surgeon General's office at Washington. He denies absolutely ever having made the statement that he possesses the American War Department cipher, but does say, however, that he has worked hard thinking that this manuscript would be of some service to the United States Government for cipher purposes.

that he has met him on several occasions upon visits to the Northwestern University for purposes of exhibiting manuscripts. He further says that he has lunched and dined with Professor Lichtenstein, but never made any statements such as he has been charged with. He further showed me a registration card indicating that he was registered for military service in England from 88 Queens Road, Richmond. Further than this, he has registered for the military census of the State of New York, in which E. P. Goodrich of New York City is director.

He informs me that he has lived in England twenty-five years, and as above stated was naturalized ^{there} in 1904.

It occurs to the writer that by reason of the fact that he is a very intelligent man, it seems strange that his accent is that of a man who has not been speaking the English language long. His appearance is more that of an Austrian than of a Jew. He opened all of his papers to me very gladly, and his story so far as it went was plausible.

De Voynich informs me that he has five nephews in the British Army.

From: Capt. Manly.

To: Lieut. Straus.

Subject: W. M. Voynich.

1. There is no ground for suspicion in regard to Mr. Voynich's cipher manuscript. It was written in England over six hundred years ago, and neither has, nor can have, the slightest bearing on the present situation.

Mr. Voynich obtained the manuscript some ten years ago when he purchased the library of one of the medietized royal families of Europe for the lump sum --- as is reported --- of five million dollars. The manuscript itself he values at about $150,000. He is very anxious to have it read, and has given photostat copies of several pages of it to various cipher experts in England, France, and America. I received seven pages from him last winter and have worked at them a good deal, without success as yet.

2. I have seen a good deal of Mr. Voynich and have talked with him a good deal about the war. He is not pro-German but strongly and consistently pro-English.

3. Mr. Voynich is by birth a Pole. He settled in London more than twenty-five years ago, married an Englishwoman, and has, I think, become a British subject. - He has always been strongly against the treatment of Poland, and if I am not mistaken has supported various movements to secure Polish nationality. He has several nephews in the British army --- one of whom is one of the leading English authorities on aeroplanes. He told me that he himself would volunteer if it were not for his age.

4. That he ever made such a remark as Mr. Lichtenstein reports is incredible. If he had been in the way of saying such things, he would certainly have made such boasts in my presence last year and year before last, when I had no connection with the U. S. Army and when he was trying to interest me in the decipherment of his cipher manuscript. If Mr. Lichtenstein gave the impression that Voynich's cipher manuscript is a suspicious document, the only possible inference is that Mr. Lichtenstein lied and lied maliciously. Mr. Lichtenstein is by profession a librarian and purchaser of books for various libraries. He has made several trips to Europe to buy books for the libraries of Northwestern University, Harvard, the University of Chicago, the Newberry Library of Chicago, and other institutions. He knows perfectly well --- as a part of his professional knowledge --- that Voynich's manuscript is an ancient document of the thirteenth century and that it has no bearing of any sort upon the present war. Furthermore he cannot have taken luncheon with Voynich at any time during the present war without hearing from him some expression of loyalty to England and horror at German atrocities. The only conclusion I can reach is that Mr. Lichtenstein has some personal grudge against Voynich which he is endeavoring to gratify or that he is himself pro-German.

My dear Mr. Bielaski:

I return herewith the file you loaned me with your letter of December 22, 1917, regarding Wilfred M. De Voynich. In this connection the following information from an officer in this section who knows De Voynich personally may be of interest to you:

"As to Voynich's cipher manuscript, I am bringing copies of it to the War College, and Lt. Yardley and I are going to work on it. I do not think Mr. Voynich ever asserted that it was in the possession of the War Department. If he thought it could be of any service to the Department, it was only because it appears to be an excellent cipher, inasmuch as it has for several years defied the effort of experts to decipher it, and he thought it might be, as it undoubtedly would, of value to the War Department to possess so valuable a system, but obviously it can not be placed at the disposal of the Government until we succeed in ascertaining what the system is.

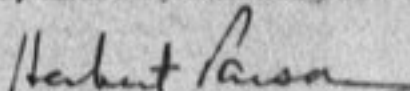

"If Mr. Voynich said that he was acquainted with the army cipher, he said nothing more than any non-military man could have said who had read the published statements to the effect that the army was using the cipher disc. This has been a matter of common knowledge for many years."

Your letter has been forwarded to me here. I will make some enquiries when I get home and talk to Herbert, if I can get hold of him. He also has taken a commission, but I write at once to say that I have known Voynich for many years, and have the highest opinion of him as a man of honor and integrity. His reasons for working in America are mainly business reasons, but he is also immensely pleased with the opportunities offered him for lecturing. The state of his wife's health amply explains any break down in a plan for her joining him. I think the idea that he is an enemy spy quite absurd.

REPORT MADE AT: AMER. PROTECTIVE LEAG.	PLACE WHERE MADE: NEW YORK CITY.	DATE WHEN MADE: JULY 29 1918.	PERIOD FOR WHICH MADE: 7-17-18.
TITLE OF CASE AND OFFENSE CHARGED OR NATURE OF MATTER UNDER INVESTIGATION: IN RE: WILFRED DE VOYNICH. (Alleged pro-German Activities)
STATEMENT OF OPERATIONS, EVIDENCE COLLECTED, NAMES AND ADDRESSES OF PERSONS INTERVIEWED, PLACES VISITED, ETC.: A.P.L. NO. 8883

This office is in receipt of the following letter dated July 11th, 1918 from Mr. Edward M. Salomon of 174 William Street:

"Wilfred De Voynich, Aeblian Bldg. 43rd Street suspected of pro-German activities, by Kenneth F. Jeffery, the agent of the building.

< Wilfred De Voynich is reported to have stated to be in possession of the code of the United States War Department.

This man was a friend of one Dr. Strauss, also a tenant of this building and who was recently interned. He banks through the British Bank of North America and is extremely well supplied with money."

The matter was assigned to Mr. Lloyd A. Wimpfheimer of this League for investigation and he reports as follows:

"From interview with Mr. K. F. Jeffery agent of the building, it brings forth the information that some time ago an agent, representing himself to come from Attorney General Gregory of Washington, called and investigated this subject. Mr. Jeffery was informed, that it was reported that the subject had a War Department Code Book, but the Washington agent called on De Voynich, and said "he was convinced that this book was an old code book which De Voynich had in his possession, and which he had, as he is a dealer in old books".

This is the explanation that De Voynich gave. At that time De Voynich's office was thoroughly gone through and examined, but he has two or three safes which could not be gotten into. Nothing suspicious was found in his office. It is natural to suppose that anything of a suspicious character could be locked in the safe.

When Dr. Isaac Strauss's office was examined later on De

July 29, 1918.

Voynich's card was found on Strauss's desk, and Strauss seemingly knew nothing of De Voynich.

De Voynich is reported to be a Pole. His wife is an English woman and is well known as the authoress of a book known as "The Gadfly". He is known to have big transactions in books, as he is a dealer in old manuscripts and old books, in fact one of the largest dealers in the world. He is reported to have been sent to Siberia by the CZAR, previous to this last one, for publishing letters which professed to show Russian connection with Germany in the war of 1870. He was afterwards pardoned. He is reported to be an ardent student of the Russian Revolution, and is well versed in Russian affairs. He has given many lectures in this country, and is highly intellectual. He has offices in San Francisco, New York, London, Rome and also Petrograd.

The only references given when he took his office in New York was the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, British Bank of North America, which reference will be investigated.

Went through the files at 13 Park Row and found a report on file under date of December 10th, 1917 written by A. E. Willett based on report from Charles B. Frey of Chicago of November 22nd, 1917. The only investigation that the report showed was a call on Mr. Jeffery which gave nothing, and a call at the Waldorf Astoria in reference to the subject, from which place he reports: "he (the subject), has lived there over a year, occupies a very expensive suite, and they consider him a valued guest, speak of him as a gentleman, and know nothing wrong about him." The investigation by Mr. Willett was instigated by the report that De Voynich was in possession of a code of the U. S. War Department. Willet says that investigation is to be continued but no further report has been made.

Also went through very carefully the file of Dr. Isaac Strasse who is now interned, but could find no mention or any clue, or connection with De Voynich.

At the agency of the Bank of British North America (where De Voynich has his account), I interviewed Mr. Harrison, one of the managers, and he told me "he had been interviewed in reference to the subject some six months ago", "that De Voynich was introduced to them by their London office, either shortly before the European war began, or shortly afterwards. Mr. Harrison could not remember exactly when, and was spoken of by them (the London office), as a loyal British subject. The monies deposited by the subject seemed to come from colleges and professors. Mr. Harrison thought they were the proceeds of lectures and sales of manuscripts. Money drawn out is sent to a concern by the name of Levetus & Co., registered as shippers with offices at 194 Bishopsgate, London. These people are classified as exporters and shippers to the Far East. Mr. Harrison said that for his own protection and for information, he was going to write to London to get more definite information on De Voynich, this being the second inquiry which he had had. Further states, that he has naturally watched the account very carefully, and has been unable to find anything wrong or suspicious with it. He describes De Voynich as a man of about 5 ft. 11 in., fairly heavy mustache, thin cheeked. Wears gold glasses. Somewhere between 50 and 60 years of age. About 175 lbs. in weight. His offices are as follows: 68 Shaftsbury Avenue, London, England via Ghibellina 110, Florence, Italy, 211 Rue St. Honore, Paris France, Centners²ever, 1 aka Marozalkowska, Warsaw, Russia. There is no record of an office in San Francisco as reported yesterday. People approached say "the main office is in London, and he claims British citizenship. Is known to have office in London approximately 25 years. His specialty seems to be manuscripts of the 15th and 16th century which are valuable, and for which he asks tremendous prices, yet he seems to be able to get them. He formerly came over here once a year with a trunk load of manuscripts, and sold them in this country.

It seems impossible in the investigation to get anything definite, or anything which would show any pro-Germanism, or anything against De Voynich, yet it seems to the writer, that the possibilities of either propaganda or pro-German activities could very easily and possibly be arranged for with the connections and facilities which De Voynich evidently has.

As stated in previous report, his room has been thoroughly searched and with the exception of the safes, and De Voynich has also been questioned, and naturally would be suspicious, and it will be impossible for anybody, without absolute authority to get anything out of him. However, it might be assumed that a search of the safes might reveal something.

The only lecture that the writer found that he has delivered, was some months ago at the University of Chicago. Perhaps it might be wise to find out through Chicago what the lecture was, the nature of it, etc.

Interviewed several people in his line of business, who are among the largest in the business. First one interviewed was George E. Smith, #8 East 45th Street says "he has known him for a long while, and did not want to do business with him. He said " he could not give any definite reason, but did not trust him, and did not think him straight." Smith also said, that quite a long while ago, prior to the war, De Voynich said that he was able to get manuscripts out of some of the old castles in Germany, and was always boasting that he could get manuscripts better than anyone else." Second man interviewed said "he had a feeling of distrust for De Voynich, not through reason of thinking him pro-German, or anything of this sort, but simply that he did not believe the man". In this respect people interviewed seem to be of the same opinion and mind as those previously interviewed, viz; De Voynich is a man who had no hesitancy in tampering with the truth, consequently is a man who does not seem to be very well liked nor trusted. All say he claims to be British citizen. From what I could learn, he does considerable business with Charles Sessler, #1314 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa. who is a handler of rare books, and also with Dr. Rosenbach, #1320 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Of the latter I am told he is believed to be a personal friend. It is quite possible that quite some information might be gotten from these two sources just mentioned. It was impossible for the writer to get any more information than already gotten. From information gathered, as given in yesterday's report, De Voynich is a specialist in 15th and 16th century manuscripts, and in first printings. He has handled some American books, but can find no trace of any published later than date of 1800, and he is not known to have any in his possession published later than that date, therefore, unless the War Department Code Book is an exceedingly old one, there is no reason why he should have it in his possession. In speaking to various people in his line of business, they could find no reason for his having an office in Warsaw, although the office at Florence and London is understandable for use in his line of business.

The firm of Lovetus Co. seems to be unknown to anybody in the book world.

Inquiry made at the Waldorf Astoria from the Assistant Manager gave no further result than previously reported as having been gotten by Mr. Willet. De Voynich moved a couple of months ago to the Hotel Manhatta, but no further information of value could be gotten there. The Waldorf Astoria reported that he had few visitors, and while there is nothing against him, he impressed them as being a queer sort of man.

As previously reported, the only possible source of information which suggests itself to the writer which might reveal something is going through the safes, which the writer could not do without the proper authority. An interview with the subject also would seem to be useless unless properly followed up with further action."

assisted in disclosing the real identity of Hugo Munsterburg, another German spy, who, it will be recalled, traveled through Mexico during the war period in an endeavor to incite a revolution there.

Dr. Cunsulus informed Agent that he had often told subject that he would be a ruined man financially if his patriotic efforts became known spread, and that he realized this but still did everything in his power to show his loyalty to the United States. Dr. Cunsulus stated that his prediction had come true and that no doubt subject was endeavoring to return to this country with a large number of valuable manuscripts which he had recently collected and which he believed should be kept in this country.

He also stated that the Armour Institute of Technology was under lasting obligations to subject for services rendered. At the conclusion of the interview informant stated that he would be glad even to take the matter up with Washington personally if necessary to see that subject was allowed immediate entry to the United States, and that numerous Washington officials had knowledge of the facts as given by him to Agent.

Agent also wishes to state that he has carefully reviewed the files of the Department comprehending reports of Special Agent Chas. D. Mr. Clarkson states having knowledge that Voynich's address was at that time 33 West 42nd Street, New York and his occupation a dealer in old manuscripts and that he had put it over many wealthy Chicagoians also that Government authorities claim he has not an honest hair on his head. STATEMENT OF OPERATIONS, EVIDENCE COLLECTED, NAMES AND ADDRESSES OF PERSONS INTERVIEWED, PLACES VISITED, ETC.

At Cleveland:

The telegram from the Bureau requesting this investigation gave the Cleveland Art Institute as reference. Agent connected with the Cleveland Art Institute and talked with Mr. Henry T. Bailey, the Dean of that institution. Dean Bailey stated that Subject is a dealer in old lettering, fine old manuscripts, books, etc.; that he is well to do, with great resources; well-known in the art educational world. Witness knew Subject only a short time last winter when Subject was in Cleveland with an exhibit at the Cleveland Art Museum. Witness has, however, known of Subject for a considerable period of time. He knew nothing concerning Subject personally but referred Agent to Mr. Whiting of the Cleveland Art Museum.

Mr. F. A. Whiting, Director of the Cleveland Art Museum, states he has known Subject by reputation for a number of years; that Subject is a very important man in the field of fine books, old manuscripts, etc.; that Subject was for a larger portion of last year in America, and was in Cleveland last winter. He further states that Subject is now coming to help the Cleveland Art Museum arrange for an exhibition of manuscripts and books and is expected to sail from England about September 28th. Witness has met Subject a number of times but could not say that he is intimately acquainted with him. He believes Subject to be a Russian; ^{that} he has been in England a number of years; believes him to be a naturalised British subject. He states he believes Subject's wife to be English born and an authoress. One of her books attracting wide attention was "The Gaily." Witness states that Subject was present at a staff meeting of the Cleveland Art Museum one day and gave a talk and witness was impressed that Subject greatly sympathized with the Allies and was opposed to the Central Powers. Witness could not recall any expression of Subject concerning the various phases of Socialism or radicalism, or the Russian, or Bolshevist, question. He stated that Subject had an exhibit at the Hollenden Hotel in Cleveland a short time while here. He referred Agent to the librarians at the Cleveland Public Library, who were reported to have had ^{closer} ~~greater~~ association with Subject while in Cleveland. He stated he had Subject's letterhead before him giving an office number at 33 West 42d Street, New York, which letterhead also indicated that Subject's secretary and assistant was Miss A. M. Will.

Agent called at the City Public Library and talked to Mr. C. P. Vitz, assistant librarian. Mr. Vitz stated that he met Subject on several occasions last year while Subject was in Cleveland. He states that this was Subject's first visit to Cleveland although he had been in the U. S. many times before. Subject is a collector and a salesman of rare old books, manuscripts, etc. None of his books are newer than the seventeenth century and many of his manuscripts go back to the 13th, 12th, and 11th centuries, and earlier. Informant met Subject repeatedly last winter and states that what information he could give Agent concerning Subject's history would be only what Subject had given him; that is, that Subject comes from Polish or Gipsy parents, though he believes he is a naturalized British subject. Either Subject's wife or mother is a well-known English authoress, one of her books being "The Gadfly." Informant does not believe Subject is ~~very~~ close to the Poles and quotes Subject as saying last winter that if the Poles were given all the territory they claimed they would take almost all Europe. He states that Subject had a display for 2 or 3 weeks at the Hollenden Hotel last winter and interested several local people in purchasing some of his books. He also had an exhibit at the Cleveland Art Museum. Informant thinks Subject will be at the Library Association meeting at Youngstown, O., next month. Subject's plan is to take a considerable collection of books and manuscript to one of the larger cities, locate himself in a prominent place and where he can advantageously display his goods, and invite interest and customers. He states that Subject's collection of books and mss. in Cleveland last year might have been valued at perhaps half a million dollars. He states Subject's headquarters are in London, with branch offices in New York, Paris, and either Rome or Florence, Italy. Subject's purpose in coming to the U.S. is purely on business connected with his mss. and books, Subject has made perhaps 9 trips across the ocean since war was declared and this will be the second trip since the armistice was signed. He has never heard Subject express himself on the subject of Socialism or the allied "isms" except to regret that many rare libraries in Russia were destroyed since the revolutionists came into power.

Agent got in connection with Mr. Paul Feiss of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, who stated he had known Subject many years; that Subject is a big bookman in London; that he came to Mr. Feiss last year with letters of introduction and Mr. Feiss bought several books from him and even had him at his home in a social way. He states Subject is unusually intelligent. He believes Subject to be a citizen of Great Britain but believes he was born in Poland. He states Subject is very much opposed to the present Russian government. He knew of nothing in Subject's conduct or utterances that would indicate that Subject was friendly with radicals, or that Subject was opposed to the present form of government of the U.S. He said Subject appeared to be proud of his British citizenship. In view of the fact that Subject's office in the U.S. is in New York City, it might be possible to obtain more information concerning his history by investigation in New York.

AT CHICAGO

On receipt of the following telegram from the Chief:

"Visa Wilfrid Michael Voynich reference Reverend Frank W Gonsaulus President Armour Institute Technology Chicago and Professor Manly care Chicago University."

Agent proceeded to the University of Chicago for the purpose of locating Prof. John M. Manly, who is given as one of the references, where he was informed that Professor Manly was probably at Lake Zurich, but that definite information might be obtained by going to the English Department, which is conducted by Professor Manly.

Agent proceeded to the English Department, which was locked up. At the office of the registrar of the college, Agent was given the professor's Chicago address, northwest corner of 58th St. and Woodlawn Ave., where he went and interviewed Mrs. Patrick, sister of Professor Manly, who stated that Professor Manly would return home in the evening. Agent then interrogated her concerning subject, and she said that she knew her brother had on various occasions purchased rare old manuscripts of subject which he brought from Europe at various times and sold to connoisseurs in America. She stated that she also knew that subject's wife was an authoress of international reputation, but she did not know the titles of any of the books which she had written. She also gave Agent the name of Edith Richert, who, she stated, is a very wealthy Chicago woman, also a customer of subject's.

Agent ascertained that this Professor

Report also from Cleveland on this party.

Acting under instructions from Special Agent McGee I called at 33 West 42nd Street, this city, which is the large Aeolian building and interviewed subject's secretary, Miss A. N. Hill. She tells me he has been in London since June 8th and wants to engage passage from Havre, France, to the United States. They have tenanted the building for two and a half years. That he is a British citizen.

I interviewed a letter carrier on the same floor namely the 16th and he tells me that there is very little mail comes there at present on account of Mr. Voynich's absence but this day he received three or four foreign newspapers. I then went and interviewed the agent of the building, a Mr. Jeffery on the 10th floor. Mr. Jeffery is a very intelligent young man and is extremely suspicious of Mr. Voynich. The rent of the suite has been paid ever since they occupied it by checks direct by the British bank of North America and last month August the rent being $100 a check was sent to the agent for $100,000. He thinks there is nothing significant about this except a mistake of the bank but he is sure there is something mysterious about this alleged British citizen. When taking the suite two and a half years ago he did not say "I will take it" His words were "I am taking it." Mr. Jeffery informs me that he is an extremely marked man and has all the appearances of untold wealth, wearing one of the most expensive fur coats he has laid his eyes on in many a day. He says that he will continue to observe him and his advice to me is to keep him under surveillance. Mr. Jeffery is a member

STATEMENT OF OPERATIONS, EVIDENCE COLLECTED, NAMES AND ADDRESSES OF PERSONS INTERVIEWED, PLACES VISITED, ETC.

AT CHICAGO

This afternoon Agent again proceeded to the home of Professor Manley, where he closed the matter of references in above case by interrogating Mrs. Patrick, sister of Professor Manly, who, since Agent's previous visit, had closely interrogated her brother.

She stated that subject during the war period had been accused of coming into this country carrying a secret code, which, however, upon investigation by her brother, was found to be a thousand years old. She stated that the man who reported subject was one Lichtenstein, connected with the Northwestern University, and that it was afterwards ascertained that Lichtenstein was intimately associated with the workings of the Secret Service Department of the German government, whereas subject, as the result of the investigation, was absolutely cleared. She stated that her brother had been in Washington during the war period and recently, and had communicated with the British government, and had established beyond a shadow of a doubt that subject was absolutely loyal to the cause of the Allies during the war period.

She stated that Professor Manley felt very deeply concerning this matter, and would vouch for subject in every way as being the proper kind of a man to be admitted to the United States at any time.

This closes the investigation.

STATEMENT OF OPERATIONS, EVIDENCE COLLECTED, NAMES AND ADDRESSES OF PERSONS INTERVIEWED, PLACES VISITED, ETC.

Continuing investigation, I called at the Bank of Montreal, 64 Wall Street, New York.

The Bank of British North America is now merged into same. Agents and accountants have been continued since 1914. Voynich's account was opened December 12, 1914 on the recommendation of Levetus & Co., London, Eng. The engraved card he presented at the time reads as follows:

----- Wilfrid M. De Voynich. -----

Hotel St. James Paris
Palazzo, Borghese. Florence
58 Shaftsbury Ave. W., London ----- Savage Club.

Mr. O. F. Alms the former assistant accountant of the bank of British North America now in the same relative position with the Bank of Montreal who is a naturalized citizen of this country, born in Cornwall, England, tells me Voynich engaged him in a conversation about the Cornish coast, where he had been on a walking trip and was apparently refreshing his memory, by getting additional details from Mr. Alms recollections of his boyhood days. His latest London address from the Bank records is #175 Piccadilly. Mr. Bog, 2nd agent of the Bank has always been suspicious of him as he talks too much and Mr. Oliver, the 3rd agent of the bank, stated he considers him an intellectual vagrant. Mr. Oliver also states that the time our department investigated him on the Code matter, he notified his main London bank, but for some reason, as far as he knows nothing came of it.

COPY OF THIS REPORT FURNISHED TO:

Cleveland, O.

It would seem that the British Government could clear up many things on this (their) subject.

In lieu of further instructions will keep this subject in mind from time to time when not engaged in more pressing duties.

Case continued.

Dear Bill:

With reference to the Department's telegram No. 6081 of September 29, 1919, 3 p.m. concerning Wilfred M. Voynich, I learn that this man proposes to visit the United States in the immediate future.

As the Department had no objection to Voynich traveling in September of 1919 I conclude that the visa may again be granted. I thought you would be interested to learn that the police are evidently keeping him more or less under surveillance, and the latest report is that Mr. Voynich appears to be strongly anti-Bolshevik.

As always,

L. LANIER WINSLOW.

Dear Mr. Hoover:

I enclose herewith copy of confidential letter No. 556
dated September 17, which is concerned with Wilfred M. Voynich.
As you have, I believe, made an investigation of this man, you may wish to get a line on him in an endeavor to keep him under surveillance. I should be grateful for any information you may have regarding Voynich.

Very truly yours,

W. H. Murray
